THE STONE COVER to KING DAVID'S WELL OF BLESSINGS & MIRACLES

Dimensions: 22” x 24” x 6”, opening: 10”, weight: 226 lbs.

On the sacred grounds of Mount Zion lies a deep, ancient well, renowned for its sweet and refreshing waters. This well, along with its stone cover, welcomed thirsty Jewish pilgrims during the days of the Second Temple, over 2,500 years ago.

In his humility, King David, sought not to be remembered through monuments but through acts of lasting benefit to the people. Adjacent to his royal shrine, he excavated this well as a source of sustenance and gratitude. His intent was simple yet profound: that those who drank from its waters would thank G-d and remember the legacy of their beloved king.

Even in eternity, King David is said to have elevated the prayers of the Jewish people to Heaven. "When you come to my resting place and request that I intercede on your behalf, I will pray for you," declared the anointed King of Israel.

Local scholars, theologians and foreign historians have placed timeless and legendary figures at this Holy Site and by this well.

A Well of Hope and Miracles

King David's Well became a sacred destination for seekers and pilgrims who came to pray at his shrine. Among them were childless women, inspired by the matriarch Rachel, who met her beloved Jacob at a well.

Legend tells that countless tears of supplication fell into the depths of King David's Well, mingling with its cool, life-giving waters. But this well did more than quench thirst; it became a source of divine intervention. Over time, people began to notice that their prayers—offered at this sacred site—were being answered.

Thus, King David's Well of Blessings and Miracles came to symbolize hope, fertility, and the Almighty's boundless compassion.

This remarkable artifact helped preserve the well's freshness and vitality for generations of pilgrims. It is a powerful symbol, deeply connected to the element of Earth—the origin of all growth and fertility and is imbued with the blessing of children.
